Whether patients seek surgery for cosmetic or reconstructive purposes, Dr. David Whiteman practices an “at-ease” philosophy, working to ensure that every patient who walks into his practice is completely comfortable with their upcoming procedure and confident in his ability to deliver exceptional, natural-looking results. From the waiting room, to the consult, to post-op care, Dr. Whiteman believes in practicing with the utmost discretion and professionalism to enhance the overall patient experience.

“Once a patient has made the decision to undergo a procedure, it’s my job to make sure they’re comfortable with every aspect of the surgery,” said Dr. Whiteman, founder of Southern Plastic Surgery in Duluth. “It’s all about open, honest conversations to create a shared vision—then working to the best of your abilities to help patients realize their expectations.”

Dr. Whiteman is double-board certified by both the American Board of Plastic Surgery and The Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons of Canada and currently serves as the chief of plastic surgery for Gwinnett Hospital System (Duluth & Lawrenceville). Since his fellowship training at Georgetown University in Washington, D.C., Dr. Whiteman has been devoted to helping breast cancer patients. He currently serves on the board of directors for The Sport of Giving, a breast cancer non-profit. Deeply committed to the cause, he founded a “buddy group” within his practice to connect breast cancer survivors.

Dr. Whiteman’s devotion to his patients is contagious—that’s why his staff has worked with him for more than ten years. “We are a family,” said Dr. Whiteman. “I’m fortunate to not only help my patients maintain their beauty, but to hang out with people I care about on a daily basis.”
